

11311

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Device for the injection of gas bubbles into a liquid metal contained in a treatment volume includes at least one static injection part made of a material inert to the liquid metal and wettable by the liquid metal, the static part having a plurality of orifices. The wettable material, and optionally orifice configuration are selected such that bubbles emitted by the device have a spreading ratio of less than 5.